South's optimistic vision of 12 tricks evaporated to only nine. What sure way did South have that would cinch the game? South should draw trumps, cash his diamond ace and pass the diamond queen, discarding two clubs from dummy. East wins and shifts to clubs, but South wins his ace and discards dummy's last club on the diamond jack. South then leads a spade to dummy's king to lose the finesse, in return, he collects 10 winners and his game.
